

Honours for his healing touch

TWO awards in a month. One a national award and another an international one. The month of November has ushered happy tidings for Dr Amarsinh Nikam, a practising homoeopath from Pimprigaon, who is now the toast of the twin industrial townships of Pimpri-Chinchwad.

Relentless in providing his healing touch and known for his philanthropic ways, 48-year-old Dr Nikam is not exactly ecstatic at the achievement. "My awards are my people. I want so serve them to the best of my ability," he says.

Dr Nikam's latest honours include "International Gold Star Millennium Award" to be conferred on him by the Global Economic Council for his contribution to the field of homoeopa-thy. The award will be presented to Dr Nikam during the international conference on "Indo-Thai Friendship and Economic Cooperation" being organised by the Global Economic Council in Bangkok on January 20.

The council, in its letter to Dr Nikam, stated that the award is presented to highlight the superb achievements of those sons and daughters of both friendly countries who have played distinguished role in the development of their respective countries. "The International Goldstar millennium award is conferred on select ones as a mark of honour and recognition," it says.

For Dr Nikam, who runs the Aditya Homoeopathic Hospital and Healing Centre in Pimprigaon, the announcement of the Millennium

Andhra Pradesh Governor Sushilkumar Shinde presenting the Indira Gandhi Sadbhavna award to Dr Amarsinh Nikam at a function in Hyderabad for his contribution in the field of homoeopathy award is a second one in November. On November 18, he received the Indira Gandhi Sadbhavna award for his work in the field of homoeopathic medicine. The award was presented to him by Andhra Pradesh Governor Sushilkumar Shinde at a function in Hyderabad.

International and national awards pour in for homoeopath Dr Amarsinh Nikam

Dr Nikam, whose book, Homoeopathy: the art of rapid and gentle healing received rave reviews in medical circles, had recently led a batch of 30 doctors to Amarnath where they provided free treatment along the 46-km path. He also led a team of young doctors to Nashik kumbh mela where they provided free treatment to nearly 700 pilgrims.

Specialising in kidney-related ailments, Dr Nikam gets patients from Pune and beyond. Crediting his success to his father, he says, "Besides gaining inspiration from my father, the support of my family and wife, Sudha, who has stood by me in good and bad times, has given me enough strength to work towards my goal."

Dr Nikam's next stop is the tribal belt of Thane where he plans to provide free treatment and medicine to malnourished children.

MANOJ MORE

The Indian Express
December 2, 2004

Honours for his healing touch

International and national awards pour in for homoeopath Dr. Amarsinh Nikam.

TWO awards in a month. One a national award and another an international one. The month of November has ushered happy tidings for Dr. Amarsinh Nikam, a practicing homoeopath from Pimprigaon, who is now the toast of the twin industrial townships of Pimpri-Chinchwad.

Restless in providing his healing touch and known for his philanthropic ways, 48-year-old Dr. Nikam is not exactly ecstatic at the achievement. "My awards are my people. I want so serve them to the best of my ability," he says.

Dr. Nikam's latest honors include "International Gold Star Millennium Award" to be conferred on him by the Global Economic Council for his contribution to the field of homoeopathy. The award will be presented to Dr. Nikam during the international conference on “Indo-Thai Friendship and Economic Cooperation” being organized by the Global Economic Council in Bangkok on January 20.

The council, in its letter to Dr. Nikam, stated that the award is presented to highlight the superb achievements of those sons and daughters of both friendly countries who have played distinguished role in the development of their respective countries. “The International Goldstar millennium award is conferred on select ones as a recognition,” it says

For Dr. Nikam, who runs the Aditya Homoeopathic Hospital and Healing Centre in Pimprigaon, the announcement of the Mellinnium award is a second one in November. On November 18, he received the Indira Gandhi Sadbhavna award for his work in the field of homoeopathic medicine. The award was presented to him by Andhra Pradesh Governor Sushilkumar Shinde at a function in Hyderabad.

Dr. Nikam, whose book, Homoeopathy : the art of rapid and gentle healing received rave reviews in medical circles, had recently led a batch of 30 doctors to Amarnath where they provided free treatment along the 46-km path. He also led a team of young doctors to Nashik Kumbh mela where they provided free treatment to nearly 700 pilgrims.

Specializing in kidney related ailments, Dr. Nikam gets patients from Pune and beyond. Crediting his success to his father, he says, “Besides gaining inspiration from my father, the support of my family and wife, Sudha, who has stood by me in good and bad times, has given me enough strength to work towards my goal.

Dr. Nikam’s next stop is the tribal belt of Thane where he plans to provide free treatment and medicine to malnourished children.